

Sophie Thomson decides to change her life in a way few people dare to do. Along the way she challenges society's norms, falls in love and solves a scandal that just may well save the world.

A heroine for our times? Meet Sophie Thomson.

“So this is me, walking down a New York street. Small, 5'2", brunette, shoulder length curly hair, blue eyes, lots of mascara. Not quite a fashion victim, but not un-trendy either. Always on a diet, never sticking to it.

“She ate too much icecream” will probably be written on my gravestone. But hey, let's not talk about death; this is a new life we're talking about here. Twenty-two years old, fresh out of college and just about ready to start over. God help me. He'd better, because I'm gonna need all the help I can get.”